

Interprofessional Education through a One Health Lens: A Symposium

OCTOBER 4-5, Colorado State University, Fort Collins, Colo.

What is the Symposium?

Interprofessional Education through a One Health Lens is a national gathering of educators, clinicians, researchers, students, and other professionals to explore the overlap of One Health and Interprofessional Education and imagine a future where IPE and One Health grow synergistically.

The goal of this symposium is to explore and coordinate the work being done across a variety of medical education settings. Didactic, experiential, and professional aspects of MD and DVM training will be examined for gaps and opportunities for infusion of IPE and One Health. We hope to improve the One Health proficiency of medical professionals. We will also examine how to incorporate other programs (RN, DO, DDS, CVT, Pharmacy).

Topics discussed will include:

- Teamwork and leadership
- Cost of care
- Mental health, resilience, and wellbeing
- Curriculum preparation, integration, and delivery
- Opioid use and other pharmaceuticals
- Geriatrics, aging, and end-of-life care

This symposium is the output from a grant from the Clinical and Translational Science Award One Health Alliance (COHA). It represents a partnership among COHA institutions, including Colorado State University, University of Colorado – Anschutz, University of Florida, University of Minnesota, University of Pennsylvania, and University of Wisconsin.

Registration

The IPE Symposium will be an in-person event with a livestream option. Registration is now open and is FREE to all attendees, both in-person and livestream.
